A Volunteer Service Meaningful to Me

There is nothing more cheerful than seeing a smile on the face due to our help. The moment when we assist those in need, we feel fulfilled and that we make the world a better place. Despite the frustration and exhaustion we might encounter, the payback will always be worthwhile. That is why I look forward to a volunteering experience. All the efforts I’ve made can change me into a better person.

I am eager to take part in a volunteer service to teach some kids inhabiting remote counties who might found it challenging to learn basic knowledge taught in school. Residing in a city, I have all the resources which make my schooling life a pleasant time. However, for so many years I’ve digested an amount of information given by teachers but never have I tried to use it in daily life. I can’t help but wonder if the knowledge passed in classes is truthly useful or not. I guess this problem is met with all the people but none of them pay attention to it, in that we are getting accustomed to learning new things passively just like a sponge absorbing the water. If I have the opportunity to teach those kids, I will think up some new skills they really need. By reconsidering what I’ve learned can help me with, definitely can I have a good command of the knowledge to deal with the kids’ future, and my own future as well.

Remember the early days in my childhood, I wanted to play the instrument and acted as if I were the greatest musician in the world. If allowed, I want to teach the kids to play the instrument. Not the boring flute given in the music classes in school, but the ones that could accompany them when they are in a good mood, or when they are overwhelmed with grief. I’ll let them understand that music is the best friend they can always turned to. Even if they are unable to play the instrument fluently, they should be capable of appreciate the sound of music. It seems that learning the piano or drums isn’t special in the cities, but those who dwell in remote areas might have few chances to get access to some kinds of instruments. Teaching music is what I want to do in a volunteer service.

The thing I want to teach in the volunteering experience is what I wanted to learn when I was a kid but nobody lighted a way for me. In the process of the service, I wish I could be the one who holds a torch, lighting others’ world and also lighting my own future.
