A Volunteer Service Meaningful to Me

Nowadays, an increasing number of senior high school students are participating in various volunteer programs in hopes of helping those in need to pass through the difficulties. Students take advantage of their leisure time and vacations to devote themselves to the needy and gain valuable life experiences.

I have taken part in several volunteer service before, such as going to the orphanage to play with those lovely kids, taking care for the elderlys in the hospitals, and sweeping streets near my neighborhood. But, the most appealing volunteer program to me is to teach the poor children in Thai Bei. Thai Bei, one of the poorest area in the world, is lacking of resources and funds to develop well-rounded educational system. Therefore, it needs countries around the globe to give it a hand, helping children there acquiring enough common knowledge to live on this competitive world. I have ever seen a volunteer in Thai Bei sharing her precious experiences in teaching those innocent kids on TV, making me longing of going there to get along with those cute students.

Without a doubt, being a volunteer there have to conquer a variety of obstacles, such as language barriers, fetal epidemic, and completely different cultures and customs. However, I am convinced that, with patient and love, I can definitely confront all the challenges, and overcome it like a piece of cake. Optimistic as I am, I can already vividly imagine how delightful I will singing and dancing with kids, I will teach the kids the English alphabets with a lovely song and tell many Chinese traditional legends and folklores to entertain them, making them learn how interesting and mysterious the world is. With my wholehearted and sincere devotion, not only will them begin to have curiosity about how amazing and wonderful the Earth is, but I will also board my horizons and being more open-hearted to embrace people around me.

Thanks to the volunteer service in Thai Bei, I can appreciate the world with a big smile. It enables me to become more generous, being more willing to help others spontaneously. Besides, due to the foreign services, it makes me know how magnificent the world is and expand my narrow perspectives. Last but not least, it takes me to see that there are still many people struggle at the brink of the world; as a result, I should cherish what I have now and give as much as I can to the needs.

As a member of global village, it is undeniable that we need aids from every corner of the world. Consequently, we should be a volunteer as frequent as we can to show gratitude to those who have helped us by helping others in return. It is believed that once we all have a kind and unselfish heart dedicating ourselves to the world, the world will become more friendly and tender to all humankinds. A volunteer service is not only meaningful to me, but to the whole world.
